Only a particular event does not change my event, every new day I face a event and every new event teaches me new lesson and every lesson changes my attitude and style of life. I would like to share a few events which changed my life activities: 1.That was the day of function in our family so we prepared food for the guests. But that day was a rainy day where we did not get the expected numbers of guests. ultimately there remained more amount of food so we decided to pack the food and give it to the poor street people and road siders. we started giving to people. Once we gave to a man he said "like a god you have came and helped us. Thank you so much". These words kept on going in my mind. From that moment I did not wasted food any a cause. 2.The other day, it was a quite hectic day I was returning from my college so I usually travel in buses from college to home. I reached the bus stop which is near a very busy road. from a long I saw a man who is trying to to cross the traffic road. No one cares him or helped him. I gone near him I found that he is a physically challenged person. Without thinking anything I started helping him to cross the road. The man got a smile in him and started holding my hand tightly that moment made me to think and changed my attitude towards to help others.
